

Preface

This book presents judicial opinions, statutes and regulations, and other material pertaining to the regulation of lawyers and the legal profession. Most of the materials reproduced here are in the public domain; excerpts from copyrighted materials are included for teaching purposes under the fair use doctrine. Materials have been redacted to omit passages not pertinent to the learning objectives. Judicial opinions have also been “cleaned up” for ease of reading.^[1]

Page Navigation

At the top of the page for each chapter, there is a drop-down “Page Navigation” menu. Hovering over this will reveal a list of the page contents, and clicking on an item will scroll to the appropriate location on the page. On mobile devices, click on the menu icon () to reveal the Page Navigation menu).

Sidenotes & Margin Notes

Following the typographical style of Edward Tufte, this site uses sidenotes and margin notes in place of traditional footnotes or endnotes. These appear in the right-hand margin, avoiding the need to jump through hyperlinks or scroll to the note text. Numbered sidenotes^[2] are used for footnotes in the source materials (with original note numbering indicated in parentheses). Unnumbered margin notes, in green sans-serif typeface, are used for editor’s comments. On mobile devices, sidenotes and margin notes may initially be hidden; clicking on the indicator for a sidenote () or margin note () will reveal the note.
